BATTLE ON HIGH SEAS

Cattle Tender Attacks Ship's Officer With a Hatchet.

VICTIM ESCAPES A DEATH BLOW

Just Because a Stowaway Was Not Allowed to Stay on Board the Boat the Hostler Tried to Take Revenge Upon the Scaman.

(By Associated Press.) NEW YORK, March 22.—A story of a narrowly averted tragedy on the high seas was told when the Atlantic transport liner Mesaba came in today from London.

The steamer arrived with J. Doyle, a cattleman, under guard, charged with having committed a murderous assault upon Chief Officer Johnston, of the steamer. Johnston has two severe wounds which Doyle is alleged to have inflicted with a hatchet.

The assault occurred on the morning of March 12. The chief officer, unarmed, was taken by surprise by the cattleman, who sprang upon him and struck him twice with the hatchet.

The only cause known for the assault is that Johnston discovered a stowaway, who was Doyle's friend, and forced him to leave the steamer just before it left London.
